Dear Student:

Basic Reading Power can help you read well in English. In this book, you can work on reading in four ways:

1. Pleasure Reading
   Read many stories and books.

2. Comprehension Skills
   Understand what you read.

3. Vocabulary Building
   Learn many new words.

4. Thinking Skills
   Learn to think in English.

Work on all four parts of the book every week. This way you can learn to be a good reader!

Yours truly,

Beatrice Mikulecky and Linda Jeffries

Reading to Understand Stories

Good readers think and ask questions when they read. Follow these steps with the story on the next page.

Step 1. Think before you read.
- Look at any pictures.
- Read the title of the story.
- Can you answer any of these questions?
  - What is the story about?
  - Who is in the story?
  - Where are they?

Step 2. Read the story.
- Do you have to know all the words? NO!
- You can understand the story without all the words.
- Don’t ask the teacher or other students about new words.
- Read to the end of the story.

Step 3. Talk about the story.
- When you finish, talk about the story with another student.
- What is the story about?
- Who is in the story?
- Where are they?
- Do you like the story? Why?

Step 4. Learn new words.
- Now look at the story again.
- Find some new words.
- Write the new words on the lines under the story.
- Make a vocabulary list. (See pages 100–103.)
The stories in this unit are fables. Fables are short stories about people or animals. They are not true stories, but they give a lesson about life. Every country has its fables.

Step 2. Read the story.

The Big Family in the Little House

Vladimir does not know what to do. He has a big family. And he lives in a little house. He is not very happy.

One day he goes to town. He talks to a wise woman. “Please help me,” he says. “My wife and I have six children. We live in a very little house. Eight people in a few rooms! We cannot live this way!”

The wise woman listens. She closes her eyes for a minute. Then she asks, “How many animals do you have?”

“We have eight animals. We have a horse, a cow, two pigs, and four chickens,” says Vladimir.

“Good. Go home now,” says the wise woman. “Take all your animals into the house with you.”

“Our animals!” says Vladimir. He goes home and does what the wise woman tells him. The next week, he goes back to the wise woman.

“This is very bad!” he says. “The animals eat our food. They fill all the rooms. They sleep in our beds.”

The wise woman closes her eyes again. Then she tells Vladimir, “Now go home. Take the animals out of the house.”

Vladimir goes home. He takes the animals out of the house. The next day, he goes back to the wise woman. This time he is happy.

“Thank you, thank you,” he says. “It’s very different without the animals. Now we can eat. Now we can sleep. Now we like our house. Thank you for your help. You are a very wise woman!”

That's Not the Way to Do It!

Hans wants to sell his horse. He goes down the road to town. He and his young son are walking with the horse. There are some boys near the road.

"That's not the way to do it!" says a boy. "Why is that man walking? He has a horse!"

"He's right," says Hans. He gets on the horse. The son walks behind him. Then they see some women.

"Look at that man!" says a woman. "He is on the horse. And his poor boy must walk."

"She's right," says Hans. He gets off and he puts his son on the horse. They walk some more.

"Isn't that terrible!" says an old man. "Young people have no love for their parents! Look at that boy on the horse. His poor father is walking."

"He's right," says Hans. He gets off the horse behind his son. Then they see some girls.

"Two people on a horse!" say the girls. "The poor animal."

"They're right," says Hans. He and his son get off the horse. They take the horse in their arms. They carry him down the road.

The horse is big and he almost falls.

They come to a river with a bridge. Some people are on the bridge. "Look at that!" they say. "Look at the horse!" They laugh and laugh.

The horse does not like this. He moves here and there. He wants to run away. "Help, help," cries Hans. And then they all fall off the bridge and into the river—the horse, Hans, and his son.

"Next time," says Hans, "I am not going to listen to other people. I am going to do it my way."

The Wolf and the Dog

A wolf is looking for food. He is very hungry. One evening, he sees some chickens in a yard. He wants to eat those chickens. But there is a dog in the yard, too. The dog is very big and strong. The wolf does not want to fight the dog, but he is very, very hungry. He waits near the yard.

The wolf sees a man come out of the house. The man gives some food to the dog. Then he goes back in the house.

“Good evening,” the wolf calls to the dog.

“Good evening,” answers the dog. He is eating his dinner.

The wolf says, “Do you get food every day?”
"Two times a day," answers the dog. "I get breakfast in the morning and dinner in the evening." He eats some more. Then he looks at the wolf. "Are you hungry? Come live here with me. This is a good life. I help the man a little. At night I sleep near the chickens. No animals can get them."

The dog eats all his dinner and sits down. He says to the wolf, "You are always running and fighting. Your life is not easy. Come live here. Life is easy here."

The wolf sits down near the dog. He thinks, "Why not? I can eat every day here, and I can have a friend."

But then he looks at the dog.

"What is that under your ears?" he asks.

"What?" says the dog.

"Look at your neck! It is all red!" says the wolf.

"Oh, that is nothing," says the dog.

"Nothing!" says the wolf. "It is terrible!"

"No, no," says the dog. "It is the chain. In the day, the farmer puts a chain on my neck."

"A chain!" says the wolf. "So you can't run. You must stay there by the house all day!"

"Yes," answers the dog.

"Then no, thank you, my friend. I cannot stay here with you. I do not want a chain on my neck. I am going back to my old life. Good-bye!"

And the wolf runs away, still hungry.

A Bell on the Cat

A large family of mice live in a store. There is always food in the store. Another family of mice comes to the store. Soon there are lots and lots of mice in the store.

The storekeeper is not happy about this. He says, “There are too many mice here!” So one day he goes out. He gets a big, black cat. It is hungry and it likes to eat mice.

The mice do not know what to do. “What can we do?” says a mother mouse. “This cat is terrible. It is going to kill us all.”

“We must talk to our president. He always knows what to do,” says another mouse. So they go to the president. “Mr. President,” they say, “the cat is going to kill us. We are afraid. What can we do?”

The president is a big, old mouse. He says, “We must have a meeting. All the mice must come.”

And so there is a meeting of all the mice. The president of the mice comes in and stands up.

“My dear friends,” he says, “we are living in a bad time. A big, black cat is here in our store. This terrible animal wants to eat us all. But my friends, I know what to do. Your president always has the answer. We can put a bell on the cat. That way we can always hear it. And we can run away in time.”

“Hurrah!” say all the mice. “Our president is very wise.” The mice are all happy. They are all talking about their president. “Isn’t he a wise mouse?” they say. “Isn’t he a good president?”

But then a young mouse speaks. “Mr. President,” she says, “I have a question.”

“Yes,” says the president.

“Please,” says the young mouse. “Who is going to put the bell on the cat?”

“Not I! Not I!” say all the mice. Then they stop talking. They all go away. The next day, they move out of the store.

The Boy and the Wolf

Kamal lives in a little village. Every day he goes out with his sheep. He stays with the sheep all day. In the evening he comes back to the village.

One day, the boy thinks, "I do not like this! I am with the sheep all day. The sheep do not talk, and they do not listen to me. What can I do?"

Kamal sits there for some time. Then he says, "I know!" And he cries, "Wolf! Wolf!"

In a few minutes, people come running from the village. "Where is the wolf?" they ask. "Oh, there is no wolf," says the boy. "I wanted to see you and talk to you."

The people are not happy. They go back to the village. "That bad boy!" they say.

The next day, Kamal is with his sheep. Again, he does not want to be alone. He cries, "Wolf! Wolf!"

Again, the people come from the village. This time, they are very angry. "You must not do that again!" they say. "Next time, we are not going to listen." And they go back to their work.

That same afternoon, Kamal is alone with his sheep. He is almost asleep. Then he hears something in the trees. He opens his eyes. It is a wolf. The wolf is coming to eat his sheep.
“Help! Help!” cries Kamal. “There is a wolf!” The people in the village hear the boy, but this time they do not come. So Kamal runs away, and the wolf kills and eats all the sheep.

The Bear and the Two Friends

One day, Dan and Jim walked down the road. “What a beautiful day!” said Dan. “Yes, this is a good day for a walk,” said Jim. “It is not raining, and it is not hot.” So they talked and walked. They walked and talked. They came to a mountain with lots of trees. Then Jim stopped talking. There was a bear behind a tree. Jim said nothing to Dan. In a minute, Jim was up in a tree. Then he called to his friend, “Oh Dan, there is a bear!”

Dan did not have time to run. He did not have time to go up a tree. So he fell to the ground. He did not move.

The bear walked over to him and smelled him. He made noises in Dan’s ear. Dan still did not move. After some time, the bear went away. Bears do not eat dead people or animals.

Then Jim came down from the tree. “Sorry,” he said. “I wanted to tell you about the bear. But first, I wanted to get up the tree.”

Dan said nothing. He got up from the ground. “What did the bear say to you?” asked Jim.

“He told me something very important,” said Dan. “Oh, what was that?” asked Jim.

“He told me about good friends. Good friends do not run away. Good friends help their friends.”

And Dan walked down the road alone.

Sinbad and the Genie

One day, Sinbad the Sailor was by the sea. He sat down by the water. Somebody called to him. There was an old bottle near him. He looked at the bottle. In it, there was a very, very little person. It was a genie.

"Help! Help!" said the genie. "Please let me out."

Sinbad opened the bottle. A big, gray cloud came out. In the cloud, there was a very, very big genie.

"Thank you, Sailor. And now, I am going to eat you. My last meal was 5,000 years ago. I am very hungry."

The genie was very big and strong, and he had Sinbad in his hand. Sinbad was small and not very strong. But he was clever. He said to the genie, "How can you eat me—a little thing like you?"

"Little?" said the genie, in a terrible way. "I am very big!"

"How can you be very big?" asked Sinbad. "You were in this little bottle!"

"I changed," said the genie. "You can see that!"

"No, no," said Sinbad. "I see only a little bottle."

The genie's face was all red. He was very terrible to see. "I can change!" he said. "Look at me!"

The genie went into his big, gray cloud. Then the cloud went away. The genie was little, and he was inside the bottle again.

Sinbad put the top on the bottle. He put the bottle in the sea and walked away. "Good-bye for another 5,000 years!" Sinbad said.

The Strongest Person

Mariko was a girl mouse. She loved Nazumi, a boy mouse. They wanted to marry. But Mariko’s parents said no. Mariko must marry the strongest person in the world. But who was the strongest person in the world?

Her parents looked up at the sky. “The sun is the strongest person,” they said. They asked the sun, “Do you want to marry our daughter?”

“Oh, Wind,” said Mariko’s parents. “What do you say? Are you very strong?”

“Yes, yes,” said the wind. “I’m very strong. But a high wall can stop me.”

So Mariko’s parents called to the cloud. “Are you the strongest person?” they asked.

The wall said, “I’m very strong. But look at my feet. There are many holes. Nazumi, the mouse, made those holes.”

Mariko’s parents looked at the holes. Then they went to look for Nazumi. “Nazumi,” they said, “you are the strongest person in the world! Do you want to marry our daughter?”

“Yes,” said Nazumi. And so Mariko married Nazumi, and they were very happy.

The Turtle and the Ducks

The turtle was not very happy. "Here I am on the ground," he said. "I cannot go fast. I always see the same things. I see only the ground and the grass. Poor, poor me."

Then the turtle looked up at the sky. "Look at those birds," he said. "They go many places. They see many things. I want to be a bird. I want to fly, too."

Two ducks stopped near the turtle. "Oh, ducks," asked the turtle. "What can I do? I want to go to far places. I want to see the world."

"I think we can help you," said the ducks. "Can you?" asked the turtle. "How?"

"You can fly with us to Africa or to America. You can see mountains, oceans, and cities—all the things you want to see."

"But how can I fly?" asked the turtle.

"With a stick," said the ducks. "We can hold the stick in our mouths. And you must hold on with your mouth."

And that's what they did. They went up in the air. They went many miles. The turtle saw many new things. He saw a city and lots of people.

Some people on the ground looked up. "A turtle in the air!" they said. "Run, run to the queen. There is a flying turtle. She must see it."

The queen came out to see the turtle. "Where is it?" she asked.

"Here! Can't you see me?" called the turtle. But when he opened his mouth, he fell to the ground. And there, in front of the queen and all the people, he died.

The Fisherman and His Wife

Once there was a fisherman. He and his wife lived in a little house. They were very poor.

One day he went to the sea. He wanted to get some fish for dinner. For many hours, he got nothing. Then, in the evening, he got a big, fat fish.

"Please don't eat me!" said the fish. "Tell me what you want. I can give it to you."

The fisherman put the fish back into the sea. He went home and told his wife about the fish. She said, "Husband! I don't like this old house. Tell the fish I want a new house."

So the fisherman went back to the sea. He called to the fish, "Oh, fish! My wife wants a new house!"

"Go home," said the fish. "Your wife has a new house."

The fisherman went home. His wife was in a nice, new house.

There were flowers in the yard, and she was very happy.

But the next morning, she was not happy. She said to her husband, "This house is very small. I want a big house now. Go back to the fish and tell him."
So the fisherman went back to the sea. "Oh, fish!" he called.

"My wife wants a big house now."

"Go home," said the fish. "Your wife has a big house."
The fisherman went home. There was his wife in a very big and beautiful house. She was very happy.

But the next morning she said, "A big house is nice. But it is not enough. I want to be a queen!"

So the fisherman went back to the sea again. "Oh, fish!" he called. "My wife wants to be a queen now."

"Go home," said the fish. "Your wife is a queen."
The fisherman went home. His wife was now a queen. She had on a beautiful dress. "Now you can be happy," said the fisherman to his wife.

The next morning it rained. The fisherman's wife said, "I don't like the rain. Tell the fish. I want to stop the rain."

So the fisherman went back to the sea another time. "Oh, fish!"

"Go home," said the fish. "Your wife asks for too much! Now she has nothing."

The fisherman went home. His wife was in their old house again. And once again, they were very poor.

Story 1

A Very Special Party

Amalya Antonovna lived in St. Petersburg, Russia. She was 75 years old, and she was alone. Her husband was dead. She had a son, Pavel, but maybe he was also dead. She last saw him in 1945. After that, she did not hear anymore about him.

What happened in 1945? That was a time of war in Europe. Pavel's father was a soldier. He was killed in the war in 1942. After that, Amalya was alone with her baby. Those were terrible times in Russia. There was very little food. The winter was very cold. The German army was in Russia. German soldiers killed many Russians. They sent many other Russians to Germany to work. Many of these people got sick and died.

Amalya was a Russian worker in Germany. At the end of the war, she was still alive. Her baby was still alive, too. But Amalya was very sick. The English and American armies came to the town. Amalya asked some English soldiers for help. “Take my little boy,” she said. “I am very sick, but he must live.”
So Pavel went to England. He went to live with an English family, the Corbetts. He was just two years old. Grace and George Corbett were very good to Pavel. He was a son for them. They gave him an English name—Paul. They never told him about his Russian mother.

Paul Corbett married and had two children. When he was 45, Grace Corbett died. Then George Corbett told him about his Russian mother. Paul wanted to look for her. Maybe she was dead after all these years. But maybe not.

He sent many letters to Russia. Several years passed. Then one day a letter came from St. Petersburg. Amalya was alive and well, and she wanted very much to see him. So Paul Corbett went with his family to St. Petersburg.

Amalya had a big party. All her friends came to meet her son. There was lots of good Russian food and music. Amalya did not speak any English. Paul and his family did not speak any Russian. But words were not important. They were all happy.

Christmas Gifts

Christmas was a big day for John and Adele. They always had a very nice dinner. Then they opened their presents. Often the presents were small things. John and Adele did not have much money. But John always had something for Adele, and Adele always had something for John.

It was the day before Christmas. But this year John and Adele still did not have any presents. They did not have any money for presents. "We are happy without them," they said.

But it was not true. John wanted to buy something for his wife. And Adele wanted to buy something for her husband.

Adele went into town. She looked at the store windows. There were many beautiful things in the windows. In the window of a music store, she saw some cassettes. There was a new cassette by Pavarotti. John loved music, and he loved Pavarotti. Adele wanted to buy that cassette for John, but she did not have the money.

Then she remembered her hair. Adele had very long, beautiful red hair. Her hairdresser wanted to cut it and buy it from her. Adele always said no. But now she went to the hairdresser and said yes.

Then she went back to the music store with the money, and she bought the Pavarotti cassette.
When Adele came home, John was already there.
"What do you think?" Adele asked him. "Do you like my new Christmas haircut?"
"Oh no!" John said.
"You don't like it?" Adele said.
"Why did you do that?" John asked.
"I wanted to buy something for you," said Adele. "So I sold my hair. Here is your present."
John opened the present. "Oh, Adele!" he said. "This is terrible!"
"You mean you don't like the cassette?" asked Adele.
"No, no. Thank you. It's a beautiful cassette," said John. "But I don't have a cassette player now. I needed money for your present, and my friend George needed a cassette player. So I sold the cassette player to him. Here's your present."
Adele opened a small box. In it there were two combs for her hair. They were very beautiful, but now her hair was very short. She couldn't use combs!
"I can use them next year," she said. "Thank you, my love."
"And someday soon I'm going to get another cassette player," John said. He smiled. "You know, Adele, you're beautiful with short hair!"

Story 3

The Telephone Call

Camille was three years old. She lived in a small town in France. Her father worked far away in the city. Her mother worked in the house.

One Saturday, Camille's mother fell down on the floor. Her eyes were closed. She did not move. Camille's father was home. He called the doctor on the telephone. The doctor came to help Camille's mother. In a few days, she was well.

Then one day she fell down again. This time, Camille's father was not home. There was only Camille. She looked at her mother on the floor, and she was afraid. She started to cry. Then she remembered the telephone. She went to the telephone. She did the same thing her father did. She pushed some numbers on the telephone.

A man answered her call. He was Claude Armand, an engineer. His office was in the city. He did not know Camille. At first, he did not understand her.
Camille said, "Mommy, Mommy!"
"Where is your mother?" asked Claude Armand.
"She's lying down," said Camille. "She can't get up." Camille started to cry.

Claude Armand wanted to help Camille. "Where do you live?"
he asked.
"Near my grandma," she answered. She didn't know her street or her town. She was only three!

Then Claude Armand said to her, "Don't put down the telephone. Talk to me some more. Tell me about your daddy. Where is he?"

He asked her lots of questions. At the same time, a friend in his office called the telephone company. She told the telephone company about Camille's mother. She said they needed Camille's address. The telephone company told the police. The police told the government in Paris. Then the government said okay to the police. The police said okay to the telephone company. And the telephone company told them Camille's address.

All this time, Camille talked with Claude Armand. She told him about her house and her family. She told him about her grandparents, her friends, and her little cat. They talked for 45 minutes!

Then the police were at Camille's house with a doctor. They called to her and rang the doorbell. Camille said good-bye to Claude Armand and went to open the door. Now she was not alone anymore. Now her mother was okay.

Story 4

What's in the Back Seat?

It was a cold day in Chicago. Laura Simon had no more milk in her refrigerator. She put the baby in the car, and she drove to the store. It was only ten minutes away. But in five minutes, the baby was asleep.

Laura stopped in front of the store. She looked at the sleeping baby. She did not want to wake him up. But she also did not want him to get cold. There was a coat on the back seat. She put it over the baby. Then she went into the store. The car key was still in the car.
Todd Jenkins walked by. He saw the key in Laura Simon’s car. He was cold, and he did not want to walk. He got in the car and drove away.

After five minutes, there was a noise in the car. What was that? Todd drove some more. Then he stopped. There was something in the car. He looked at the back seat and saw a coat. The noise came from under the coat. He moved the coat, and there was a baby!

Todd looked at the baby. The baby looked at him and smiled. “Daa Daa,” said the baby.

“No, I’m not your daddy,” said Todd. He got out of the car and walked away. Then he looked back. The baby started to cry. Todd went back to the car. The baby stopped crying and smiled again. “Daa Daa,” he said again.

Todd got back in the car and drove some more. The baby was happy. But after a few minutes, he started to cry again. “Waa waa,” he said.

“I don’t have any milk,” said Todd. “Now what can I do? He’s hungry!”

Todd looked at the baby. The baby looked at Todd. “Waa waa!” said the baby again.

“Okay, okay,” Todd said. He drove back to the store. Laura Simon was there. A policeman and policewoman were there, too.

Todd Jenkins got out of the car. “I think your baby is hungry,” he said to Laura Simon.

“My poor baby!” said Laura Simon, and she ran to the car. “Never again!” said Todd Jenkins to the police, and they took him away.

Story 5

A Day Trip to Mexico

Seattle is a city by the sea. There are lots of boats in Seattle. Some of the boats are fishing boats. Some boats go to far places. Some boats go to the San Juan Islands near by.
Anthony Brewer lived in Seattle. He was sixteen, and he wanted to go away. It was the end of the school year, and it was hot. Anthony’s friends were on the San Juan Islands. He wanted to go there, too.

One morning, Anthony had an idea. He didn’t tell his parents about his idea. They were at work. He went down to the boats. He wanted to buy a ticket for the San Juan Islands. But he did not have very much money. He walked by the boats. It was early, and there were not many people. Then he walked onto a boat. There were some large boxes on the boat. He got into a box and closed it.

There was a hole in the box. Anthony looked through the hole, and he saw some men come onto the boat. Then the boat started to move. Anthony saw the buildings of Seattle, and then he saw only the sea.

It was a warm day. Anthony was happy in the box. The boat moved up and down a little. Soon he was asleep. He slept for two hours. Two hours! Why were they still at sea? The San Juan Islands were only an hour from Seattle. He looked out and saw only the sea all around. He listened to the people on the boat, but he could not understand them. Maybe this wasn’t the boat for the San Juan Islands! What boat was it? Where was it going?

Anthony didn’t know what to do. He sat in the box all day. Night came and it was very cold in the box. He had no warm clothing, no food, and nothing to drink. Now he wanted to go home!

The next morning, some men opened the box. They saw Anthony, and they pulled him out. Anthony was afraid. But the men smiled, and they gave him some food and some water.

“Where is the boat going?” he asked.

“To Mexico,” they answered.

“Can you stop before that?” he asked. “I have to go home!”

“No,” they said. “We can’t stop. But we can call your parents on the radio.”

Ten days later, Anthony was in Mexico. He went to the Mexican police for help. They put him on a plane to Seattle. His parents came to get him at the airport. The airplane ticket cost them $500, but they were not angry. They were happy to see Anthony again.

“I wanted to go away,” said Anthony, “but not to Mexico! I only wanted to go on a day trip.”
In 1942, Italy was at war. Antonio was a soldier in the Italian army. He was in a small city in Tunisia. In this city, there was a hotel. The manager of the hotel was Italian.

Antonio often went to the hotel. He was a friend of the manager and his family. He liked to talk with them about Italy and about the end of the war. The manager's daughter, Sabrina, was 19. She was very beautiful. Antonio liked her very much and wanted to talk with her, but she did not like to talk to soldiers.

So Antonio watched her and waited. Then, one day, she smiled at him. He smiled at her, and they started talking. They talked and talked. In a short time, they were in love, and they wanted to get married. But her parents said, "You can't get married now because there is war. You must wait."

Soon the war was close to the city. One day, Antonio went to see Sabrina. He was very sad. "I must leave tomorrow with the army," he said. "The British army is going to be here soon."

Sabrina cried and cried. Antonio cried, too. He was at the hotel with Sabrina and her family all night. He went away with the first light. Antonio and Sabrina stopped at the door for a last kiss. Then he walked away. At the end of the street, he looked back. Sabrina was still there at the door.

The war did not go well for the Italian army. The British army took many Italian soldiers with them. Antonio was one of these soldiers. The English sent him to India. He was there for four years.

Antonio sent many letters to Sabrina, but the letters all came back to him. Where was Sabrina? Was she still alive? He did not get any answers to his questions.

Then, in 1946, Antonio went back to Italy. He went to work in Milan. He got married, and soon he had two children. One day, in 1961, he was in Rome, and he saw Sabrina in a store. He went into the store.

At first, she was happy to see him, but then she cried. They went into a cafe and had some coffee. Sabrina now lived in Rome. She was married and had three children. She was happy with her life. "But," she said, "I waited for many years. I waited for you."

It was time for Antonio to get his train back to Milan. They went out into the street and said good-bye. Antonio went back to his family in Milan, and Sabrina went back to her family in Rome. Antonio never saw Sabrina again.
Man's Best Friend

Rudy was a large, brown dog. He was from Hamburg, Germany, but he was not at home very often. He was in a truck on the roads of Europe.

Rudy did not drive the truck. His friend, Heinrich, was the driver. Rudy and Heinrich often lived in the truck for many days. They stopped at restaurants for their meals. They had beds on the truck. On long drives, Heinrich did not want to fall asleep. So he talked to Rudy and Rudy listened.

In Hamburg, they lived with Heinrich's sister, Elena. At home, Heinrich and Rudy liked to sleep a lot. They also went for long walks, or they went to see Heinrich's friends. Rudy always went with Heinrich.

One evening, Rudy and Heinrich did not come home. In the morning, Elena called Heinrich's friends. They did not know about Heinrich. Then there was a noise at the door. Elena opened the door, and there was Rudy. He was alone. He barked at her and wanted her to go out with him. Elena called the police. After some time, the police called her back. Heinrich was in the hospital. It was his heart. He was very sick.

Elena went to the hospital to see her brother. His eyes were closed, and he did not talk. The doctor said Heinrich was not in danger anymore but was still very sick.

The next day, Heinrich opened his eyes. He asked about Rudy. Poor Rudy. He was at home, waiting for Heinrich. He waited and waited by the door. He did not want to get up, and he did not want to eat. Elena called the animal doctor. The doctor looked at Rudy and said, "This dog is not sick. He's sad."

Elena told Heinrich about Rudy. Heinrich said, "Give Rudy my hat."

Elena went home with the hat. Rudy put his nose to the hat. He moved his tail. He ate some food and got up from the floor. But he did not move away from the door. The next day he stopped eating again.

Then Elena went to Heinrich's doctor. She told him about Rudy. "Can I bring Rudy to the hospital?" she asked.

"No," said the doctor. "No dogs in the hospital." The doctor was sorry for Rudy. He talked to some other doctors. In the end, they said, "Okay. There's a little room near the hospital door. Rudy can meet Heinrich in that room."
Elena went to the hospital with Rudy. He was very thin, and he walked very slowly. But when he saw Heinrich, he jumped up and barked and barked. Heinrich was on a bed. He smiled and talked to Rudy. And after that, Rudy started to eat again. He started to run and play again.

Story 8

A Man and Many Wolves

Farley Mowat worked for the Canadian government. The government wanted to know more about wolves. Do wolves kill lots of caribou (big animals)? Do they kill people? The government told Farley to learn about wolves.

They gave him lots of food and clothes and guns. Then they put him on a plane and took him to a far place. The plane put him down and went away. There were no houses or people in this place. But there were lots of animals—and lots of wolves.

People tell terrible stories about wolves. They say wolves like to kill and eat people. Farley remembered these stories, and he was afraid. He had his gun with him all the time.

Then one day, he saw a group of wolves. There was a mother wolf with four baby wolves. A father wolf and another young wolf lived with them.

Farley watched these wolves every day. The mother was a very good mother. She gave milk to her babies. She gave them lessons about life. They learned how to get food. The father wolf got food for the mother. The young wolf played with the children. They were a nice, happy family—a wolf family!

Farley did not need his gun anymore. In a short time, he and the wolf family were friends. Farley watched them for five months. He learned many new things about wolves. He learned that many stories about wolves were not true. Wolves do not eat people, and they do not eat many large animals.

What do they eat? Lots of small animals, Farley learned. For example, they eat lots and lots of mice. Can a large animal live on mice? Farley wanted to know. There was only one way to learn. He was a large animal, too—a large man. He must try to live on mice! So he did. He ate mice—and no other food—for two weeks. After that, he did not want any more mice! But he was not thin, and he was not sick. Yes, a man can live on mice, so a wolf can, too. Now he could answer the government’s questions about wolves.

In that far place, Farley did not see many people. But he learned bad things about some men. These men told terrible stories about wolves. In the stories, wolves killed hundreds of caribou. But this was not true. Farley learned that the men killed the caribou. They also killed many wolves.

Farley Mowat never saw the wolf family again. But he wrote a book about them. He wanted people to understand wolves and to stop killing them.

Story 9

Ben and Jerry’s

Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield were good friends in high school. They came from Merrick, New York. After college, they wanted to start a business. What kind of business? A food business, of course. Ben and Jerry were different in many ways, but in one way they were the same. They liked food!

One food they liked very much was ice cream. They wanted to open an ice-cream shop. Where was a good place for an ice-cream shop? They looked at many cities and towns. Then they went to Burlington, Vermont. They liked the city a lot. It had lots of young people, and it did not have any good ice-cream shops. There was only one problem with Burlington. For four months of the year, it was cold there. Did people buy ice cream on cold days?

On May 5, 1978, Ben and Jerry opened their ice-cream shop. It was a small shop, and it was not very beautiful. But the ice cream was very good. Lots of people came to eat ice cream on opening day. They came back again and again. There were always lots of people in the shop. Ben and Jerry worked very hard. One night after work, Ben was very tired. He went to sleep on the ground in front of the shop!

After a few months, Ben and Jerry went to the bank. They had bad news. There were only a few dollars in their bank account. “Why is that?” they asked. “After all those months of hard work!”

Then they started to learn about business. They learned about costs and expenses. And they learned about marketing and sales. They started to have big ice-cream parties. They gave free ice cream on some days. People in other cities learned about Ben and Jerry’s, and they came a long way to eat the ice cream.

Ben and Jerry made more ice cream, and they started selling it to stores and restaurants. First, they went to stores and restaurants in Vermont. Then they started selling their ice cream to stores across the United States. By 1988, they were selling ice cream all over the United States. A few years later, people could also buy their ice cream in Canada, Great Britain, Russia, and Israel.

Why do people buy Ben and Jerry’s ice cream? First of all, it is very, very good ice cream. It is made with good Vermont milk, and it does not have any chemicals in it. People also buy Ben and Jerry’s ice cream because they like the company. It is now a very big company, but Ben and Jerry are not just big businessmen. They also want to help people in many different ways. They give work to lots of poor people. And every year, the company gives away 7.5 percent of their money. They give money to help children and sick people in the United States and in other countries.

Read a Book—or Go to Jail!

Stan Rosen lived in New Bedford, Massachusetts. He stole cars and bicycles from people. One day, the police saw him and sent him to jail. The next year, Stan was out of jail. He told some people his name was Jim Rosen. He got money from them for a business. Then he ran away with the money. The police got him again and sent him to jail. The year after that, Stan was home again. One night, he stole some money from a store, and again, the police got him. But this time, they sent him to Judge Kane.

Judge Kane asked Stan, “Do you want to go to jail again? Or do you want to read books?”

Stan did not understand.

“This time,” said the judge, “you can decide. You can read books with Professor Waxler at the New Bedford high school. Or you can go to jail.”

Stan was 27 years old. He did not have a high school degree. He did not often read books, and he did not like reading! But he did not want to go to jail again. So he decided to read books in Professor Waxler’s class.
“You must go to every class,” said Judge Kane. “And you must read all the books.”

One evening, Stan went to the first class. There were ten men in the class, and all of the men were sent by Judge Kane. In the first class, they read a short story.

Professor Waxler asked, “What did you think about it?”

The men said nothing. They did not know how to talk about stories. Stan wanted to answer the question, but he was afraid to talk. He did not want the other men to hear him.

“Did you like the story?” Professor Waxler asked him.

“No,” said Stan.

“Why not?” asked Professor Waxler.

“Because the end was happy, but life is not happy,” said Stan.

“That’s not true,” said another man. “Life is happy for some people.”

Then other men started talking about the story and about life.

They talked for two hours. Professor Waxler told them to read a book for the next class. It was a book about a young man with many problems.

Again, Professor Waxler asked, “What did you think?”

This time the men were not afraid to answer. They had lots of ideas about the book, and they talked a lot about their lives.

For 12 weeks, Stan read books and talked about them. Then he had to decide again: go to class or go to jail. He decided to go to class again.

After that, Stan took evening classes at the high school. He went to work in the daytime. The next year, he started evening classes at the university. Now Stan is a good student—and a good man. No more police or jail in Stan’s life! Thanks to Judge Kane and Professor Waxler—and some books.

Story 11

Who Took the Money?

Manuel lived in a village in Spain called Santa Maria. It was a small village in the mountains. At 15, Manuel started working on the Spanish trains. Every Monday morning, he went by train down to the city. He came back home again on Friday evening. He worked for long hours, and he worked hard.
When he was 24, he married Maria. She was from the next village. They had two daughters, Sofia and Lucinda. Manuel did not see his family very much. He was away for five days a week. But he had a good job, and that was important.

Santa Maria was a poor village. Many men there did not have good jobs. They worked only a few months every year. Their families did not have money for meat or coffee. Their children did not have good coats or shoes. But Manuel’s daughters always had good coats and shoes. The family had meat, coffee, and other good things to eat. On Sundays, Sofia and Lucinda had ice cream after dinner.

But not all Manuel’s money went to his family. Every month, he put a little money in the bank. He did not tell Maria about this.

“A little money in the bank is important,” he thought. “But money can be a bad thing. People can get angry and fight about money. I’m not going to tell my wife and daughters about this money. Not now. Someday I can tell them, and we can do something special. We can all go stay in a hotel by the sea.”

Year after year, Manuel put a little money in the bank. His daughters got married and moved to the city. Sofia married Ruiz, and they had two children, a girl and a boy. Lucinda married Carlos, and they had a girl. On weekends, Sofia and Lucinda often went back to the village with their children. The children liked the village, and they loved Manuel and Maria. They played in the garden with the dog and the cat. They went with Manuel in the mountains to get flowers and fruit. Maria cooked big meals for them and made them warm clothes.

When Manuel was 65, he stopped working. Now he did not go to the city every week. He stayed in the village with his wife. He worked in the garden, and he took care of his fruit trees. He walked a lot in the mountains, and sometimes he sat with his friends in the cafe. They drank coffee, talked, and played cards. He still got money every month from the government, and he still put a little money in the bank.

“Soon I can tell Maria and the girls about my money,” he thought. “And next summer we can all go to the seaside.”

But Manuel and Maria always had lots of things to do. There was the house and the garden, the dog and the cat, and the grandchildren. They went to school in the city now. But sometimes they were sick, and sometimes there was no school. Then they stayed with Manuel and Maria.

One day, Manuel’s wife did not feel very well. She went to bed, and Manuel called the doctor. The doctor said it was nothing. But after a week, she still did not feel well. The doctor sent her to the hospital in the city. The hospital doctors did some tests. They told the family she was very sick. Manuel, Lucinda, and Sofia stayed with her night and day in the hospital. A month went by and Maria did not get better. The doctors then said she was going to die.

Sofia and Lucinda drove her home to the village. She lived for a few more weeks. Manuel stayed with her all the time. The daughters came often. And then, one day, she said good-bye to Manuel and she died.

Lucinda and Sofia stayed with Manuel for a week after that. They put away all Maria's clothes and things. They cleaned the house and cooked. Then they went back to the city, back to their families and their jobs.

Now Manuel was alone. Some women in the village said, "We can help you in the house. We can make dinner for you and wash your clothes. You do not have to pay us very much."

Manuel said no, he did not want help. He did not want other women in his house. He also did not want to pay these women. He had money in the bank, but it was not for the village women.

Some years went by. Manuel learned how to cook and how to wash his clothes. His house was always clean, and his garden was full of fruit and vegetables. Now his grandchildren did not come very often because they had to study on the weekends. His daughters said, "Why don't you come live in the city with us?"

But Manuel did not want to leave his home. Now he did not even want to go to the seaside. He did not want to go away without Maria. He was 77 years old. On some days, he felt very old and tired. Then he liked to sit in his garden with his cat and his dog. Of course, these were not the same cat and dog. They were the first cat's and dog's children's children!

One day, Manuel looked at the cat and the dog. Now they were old, too. The dog never barked, and the cat never ran after mice. "We are all old now," Manuel said to them. "We are all going to die before long. Then who is going to have my money? I don't want the bank to have it! I must go and get it."

So, one morning, Manuel went to the bank. He asked for all his money. The bank manager came and talked to Manuel. He said, "What are you going to do with this money? You have $30,000. You can't walk home with $30,000!"

Manuel said, "It's my money. I can do what I want." He put the money in a bag and went home. At home, he put the money under his bed. He did not want people to find it. But that night he did not sleep well. When the cat came into his room, he said, "Who's that?" and jumped out of bed.

"This is no good," he said. "I can't live with all this money in my house."
In the morning, he went out to the garden. He made a big hole under a plum tree. He put the bag of money in the hole. He put dirt back in the hole, and he put grass on top. Every day, he looked at that place under the plum tree. He often thought about the money, and he thought about his daughters and grandchildren. But the money stayed under the plum tree, because there was a problem. Manuel couldn’t decide about the money. He had $30,000, and he had two daughters. He could give $15,000 to each daughter. But Sofia had two children and Lucinda had only one. So that was not good. He could give money only to the grandchildren. He could give them $10,000 each. But that meant no money for his daughters. He couldn’t do that!

The winter went by. Spring came and there were lots of flowers on the plum tree. Manuel still couldn’t decide about his money. Summer came and Manuel’s garden was full of fruit and vegetables. But the plum tree had very few plums and those plums were not sweet.

“I think the tree is telling me something,” said Manuel. “Money must not stay in a hole in the ground.”

He telephoned his daughters. “Please come this weekend,” he said. “I have something important to tell you.”

Sofia and Lucinda came on Friday evening with their families. Sofia’s girl, Yolanda, was now 20 years old and Pablo was 17. Lucinda’s girl, Julia, was 18. Yolanda was a university student. She wanted to be a doctor. Pablo and Julia were high school students. Pablo wanted to be a writer and Julia wanted to be a policewoman.

At dinner that evening, Manuel said nothing about the money. Lucinda looked at Sofia, and Sofia looked at her father. They talked about the city and the government. They talked about the village and the garden. Yolanda, Pablo, and Julia went for a walk around the village. “What is he going to tell us?” they asked. But Manuel told them nothing that evening, and they all went to bed.

At breakfast the next morning, Manuel said, “Now it is day. Now I am ready. Come with me to the garden.”

Manuel went to the plum tree and stopped. “I am getting old,” he said. “I’m going to die before long. I want to give you something.”

He took the grass away from the hole. He took out the dirt. “Oh, no!” he cried.

“What is it?” asked his daughters.

“Who took what?” asked Sofia and Lucinda.

“My money!” said Manuel.
“Your money?!” they asked. “Why did you put money in the ground? Money must stay in the bank!”

“I didn’t want them to have my money. It was my money,” said Manuel. “I wanted to give it to you.”

“How much was it?” asked Sofia.

“$30,000,” said Manuel.

“$30,000!” said Sofia and Lucinda. “You put all that money in a hole in the ground!”

Poor Manuel. He sat on the ground with his head in his hands.

“We must go to the police!” said Ruiz.

“Yes, we must tell them,” said Carlos. “Maybe they can find the thief.”

So Ruiz, Carlos, Sofia, and Lucinda ran to the police. Yolanda, Pablo, and Julia stayed with Manuel in the garden. Julia looked in the hole. She put her hands in and pulled out some very small pieces of paper.

“Look!” she said. “Look at these.”

“Pieces of money!” said Pablo.

“Why in little pieces?” asked Yolanda. “What kind of thief does that?”

“I think there were many thieves,” said Julia.

“Why do you say that?” asked Pablo.

“There were many small thieves,” said Julia.

“Children!” said Yolanda. “That’s terrible! Village children!”

“No, not children,” said Julia. “Very, very small thieves. They ate the money.”

“What do you mean?” asked Pablo.

“Look in the hole,” said Julia. “Do you see those little black things? What makes little black things? What eats paper?”

“Mice!!” said Pablo and Yolanda.

“Yes!!!” said Julia.

Manuel looked up.

“It’s true,” he said. “There are lots of mice. The cat is old and she doesn’t run after them now.”

Manuel looked at Yolanda, Pablo, and Julia. “I’m very sorry,” he said. “I wanted to give you that money. I wanted to send you to the seaside. I wanted...” He stopped.

The cat came out and sat down near Manuel. She was black and white and very fat.

“Where were you?” said Julia to the cat. “Why weren’t you out here at work?”

“Miao!” said the cat.

“Were you asleep in the house?” asked Julia.

“Miao,” said the cat.
Then Pablo started to laugh. "Think about it," he said. "$30,000! Those mice ate $30,000!"

Yolanda and Julia also started to laugh.

"What are the police going to do?" said Pablo. "Take the mice to jail?"

Yolanda, Pablo, and Julia laughed more and more. They fell on the ground laughing. Manuel looked at them.

He thought, "How can they laugh? That was years of work, that money."

He listened to his grandchildren, still laughing and talking. And then he thought, "Maybe they're right. Why cry? I can't get the money back now."

And he smiled sadly at the cat.
Now you are ready to read a book! What can you tell about this book?

What is a spy?
Who is Simon?
Is this a sad story or a happy one?

Learning More New Words from Your Pleasure Reading Book

After you read, write the new words in your notebook. (See page 103.) Write the word and write the sentence (or sentences) around the word. Next write the meaning (in English or your language). Then check the meaning with your teacher or in the dictionary.
Example:

Simon Simple is at the station. He is going on a train.
There are policemen at the station. There are policemen on the trains. They are all working very hard.
“Why are the police here?” Simon asks a man. “Look,” the man says. Simon looks at the man’s newspaper.
‘Do you know this man?’ he reads. ‘He’s a spy! Find him! Stop him! Catch him!’

a. New word: station
b. Sentences: Simple Simon is at the station. He is going on a train.
c. Meaning: a place to get on a train
d. Check the meaning with your teacher or in the dictionary. Is it correct? yes

Looking for a Pleasure Reading Book

Now you can look for a book to read. It must be interesting to you! It must not be very easy for you, and it must not be very difficult.

How to find the right book for you:

1. Look at the front and the back of the book.
2. Read the title (name) of the book. What is it about? Is it interesting?
3. Read the first page.

How many words are new for you? _______
   no new words → This book may be too easy for you.
   1-5 new words → This book is right for you.
   6 or more new words → This book is difficult for you.

What is an inference? It's a way of guessing. When you make an inference, you have some information and you guess more things from that information.

You often make inferences in your life. You can make inferences on the bus, for example. You hear two people talking. You do not know what they are talking about. But after you listen a little, you can guess what they are talking about.

Making inferences is important when you read. It can often help you understand what you are reading. Good readers, in fact, make inferences all the time. In these exercises, you can learn to make inferences.

Example:

Look at the picture and answer the questions. You must make inferences from the picture! Work with another student.
1. Where are these people? in an airplane
2. What are their jobs? They're both business people.
3. What are they doing? The man is showing something to the woman.
4. What are they saying? The man is saying, "Here is a photo of my family."

Exercise 1

Make inferences from this picture and answer the questions. Work with another student.

1. Where are these people?

2. What are their jobs?

3. What are they doing?

4. What are they saying?

Talk to some other students. Do they have the same answers?

Exercise 6

Make inferences from this part of a story. Read and answer the questions.

The sun is going down. Jonas cannot find the road. He listens to the river and stays near it.
What is that? Jonas hears something. He listens. A man is near. A man is calling. A man wants help!
"Where are you?" Jonas calls.
"Here! Come here! Help me!" the man answers.
Jonas looks behind a big stone. "Harry!" he says. "What are you doing here?"
"I'm running from Bernie and Pete," Harry says. "But my leg is bad. I can't go on. Bernie and Pete are looking for me. They're angry. There isn't any gold in this river."
"What?" Jonas says. "But you... in the bar...
"It's not in the water," Harry says. "It's here. Look." He brings out the bags of gold.

1. Where are these people?

Exercise 7

Make inferences from this part of the story. Read and answer the questions.

Four days later, Jenny and Blue Sky are making the beds. Suddenly they hear something. Two men are shouting. Jenny looks out of the window. She can see Jack Crane and her father in front of the farmhouse. Jack Crane's face is very red.
"Do it!" he shouts.
"No, I'm not going to," Sam shouts back. "It's Sunday and I don't work on Sundays. You do it!"
Jenny runs downstairs and out of the house. There is a strong wind and it is raining.
"What's happening?" she asks her father.
"We're leaving in the morning," Sam answers. He is walking very fast. Jenny looks at him.
"But... how are we going to eat? We don't have any money."
Sam does not answer. His eyes are cold and hard.
Leaping Larry says, "We want to see the island."
"All right," says Duncan. "We can go in my boat."
Duncan, Larry, and Roxanne get into Duncan's boat. Jock jumps in, too. Roxanne is carrying Bobo.
Duncan takes them around the island. The sun is shining and it's a beautiful day. But Roxanne isn't happy.
"What do you do all day?" she asks Duncan.
"Well," says Duncan, "I go for walks and I fish. And sometimes I go swimming."
"Is that all?" Roxanne asks.
"Well," says Duncan, "I'm also writing a book."
"A book!" says Roxanne. "What about?"
"About Lafla," says Duncan.
"Oh," says Roxanne. "That isn't very exciting."
"Listen, honey," says Larry. "We can make the island exciting. We can have pop concerts here. It's just fine for concerts. Hundreds of people can come!"
Duncan looks at Jock. Jock looks at Duncan.
"Pop concerts!" they think. "Oh, no!"

What is a paragraph?
A paragraph is a group of sentences about one topic. There is usually one sentence that tells you the topic. All the other sentences tell more about the topic. Good readers look for the topic that way.

1. Is this a good paragraph?

Every morning, Susan Powers eats a big breakfast. She eats two eggs, one slice of bread, and a banana. She drinks a glass of orange juice and a big cup of tea. Susan says she is ready to go to work after a good breakfast.

Yes  No

2. Is this a good paragraph?

Every morning, Susan Powers eats a big breakfast. She works in a bank in New York. Many people work at the bank. Some people go shopping before work. Others go shopping in the morning. On rainy days, they all bring their umbrellas to work.

Yes  No

Number 1 is a good paragraph. All of the sentences are about one topic: Susan’s breakfast.

Number 2 is not a good paragraph. The sentences are about many different topics.

Remember

- A good paragraph has one topic.
- All the sentences are about that topic.
Exercise 1

Read about the Beatles. Think about good paragraphs.

The Beatles

1. Can you make a good paragraph from these sentences?
   Paul McCartney is a big star in music.
   He was one of the Beatles.
   He sang many of their songs.
   Paul wrote many of the Beatles' songs.
   All around the world, people love his songs.

   Yes  No

   Why? All the sentences are about one topic: Paul McCartney.

2. Can you make a good paragraph from these sentences?
   Ringo Starr was also a Beatle.
   He was in the Beatles group for many years.
   He sang a good song called “Yellow Submarine.”
   Ringo always played the drums.
   Now he still makes music, but not with the Beatles.

   Yes  No

   Why?

Exercise 2

Turn to Unit 5, Exercise 8, pages 81–82. Write the correct sentences in numbers 1 through 6 as a paragraph.

Topic: Asha Sachdev, Indian film star

Exercise 3

Turn to Unit 5, Exercise 9, pages 82–83. Write sentences 1 through 8 as a paragraph.

Topic: Ho Kwangliang's shoe companies
Exercise 4

Read about computers and the Internet. Ask questions: What is this paragraph about? What is the topic? Then circle the best topic for each paragraph.

Computers and the Internet

1. Computers can do many things these days. First of all, they can add numbers fast and well. They can also print things fast and well. You can use them to send letters to people all over the world. You can find information for school or business. You can also shop for things on the computer, and you can watch a movie on the computer.

What is the best topic?
- a. buying things on the computer
- b. things you can do with a computer
- c. computers

Choice a, "Buying things on the computer," is not a good topic. It tells about only part of the paragraph.
Choice b, "Things you can do with a computer," is a good topic.
Choice c, "Computers," is not a good topic. The paragraph does not tell us all about computers. It only tells about things you can do with computers. It does not tell, for example, about how to use computers.

2. Do you have an e-mail (electronic mail) address? Millions of people around the world have e-mail addresses. With e-mail, you can "talk" with people from Montevideo to Kyoto. It does not cost very much, and it is fast. E-mail helps many people with their work. Other people use e-mail for fun. They talk with their family, or they “meet” people with the same interests.

- a. telephone communication
- b. how e-mail helps at work
- c. how people use e-mail
3. E-mail works in a very new way. You do not use the telephone, but you must have a telephone line. You write your letter on the computer. Then you tell the computer to send it to someone. Your computer sends it by telephone line to a big computer. The big computer sends your letter to another big computer. That computer sends it to the small computer on the address. That is how people use e-mail to “talk.”

a. how e-mail works
b. how the Internet talks to computers
c. how a telephone line works

4. The Internet is not only e-mail. People use the Internet in other ways, too. You can use the Internet to find something in a library. The library can be in any country in the world. Your computer “talks” to the computer at the library. Then you can ask to read books or newspapers at the library. You can also ask the library to send information. The information travels by the Internet to your computer. Then you can use it whenever you want.

a. using the Internet for e-mail
b. using the library for information
c. using the library on the Internet

5. Another way to use the Internet is through the World Wide Web (WWW). On the WWW, you can find “sites.” Companies, universities, and cities make these sites so you can learn about them. There are pictures and a lot of information. You can use the WWW, for example, before you travel. You ask your computer to find the site of a city. Then you can get information about that city. Or you can ask for the site of a company. You can learn about that company before you do business with them.

a. getting information about a new city
b. many ways to use the Internet
c. using WWW on the Internet
1. Swimming, bicycling, and running are three very popular sports. Some people like to do all three sports in one race. They can do all three in a triathlon race. Triathlon means “three sports.” In a triathlon the people must first swim for a mile (1.6 km). Then they must ride a bicycle for about 10 miles (16 km). And then they must run for three miles (4.8 km). You must be a very strong person to win a triathlon!

a. what people do in a triathlon
b. popular sports
c. swimming in a triathlon
2. The men and women in triathlons are called triathletes. Triathletes must work hard all year to get ready. Every day, they run and swim and ride their bicycles. They must also do special exercises for their bodies. After many months of work, they are ready for a race. There are many races in many countries. One famous triathlon is the Ironman race in Hawaii. Another is the Noosa race in Australia. Triathletes come to these races from all over the world.

a. the Ironman race
b. races in many countries
c. triathletes and triathlons

3. Karen Smyers and Mark Allen are two famous triathletes. Karen Smyers, 34 years old, is from the United States. She gets ready for triathlons all year, and she goes to many races. That is her job. The Nike company gives her money to live. Mark Allen also is a full-time triathlete. He is 37 years old, and he is from the United States. In 1995, Karen and Mark were the winners in triathlons in many different countries. They also were the winners in the Ironman race in Hawaii.

a. triathletes from the United States
b. the winners of the 1995 Ironman race
c. the best triathletes of 1995
Exercise 6

There is a sentence missing from each paragraph in this exercise. The missing sentences are in the box. Write the correct sentence in each paragraph. Then write the topic.

Writers in the English Language

1. Topic: ____________________________

Edna O'Brien lives in England, but she is Irish. She writes stories and books about Irish people. Some of her stories are about life in Ireland in the past and others are about Ireland today. They are always very real. ____________________________

They are also very true to life—sometimes funny and sometimes sad. The Country Girls and Time and Tide are two of O'Brien's books.

2. Topic: ____________________________

Thomas Keneally is an Australian writer. He lives in Sydney with his family. But often he is not at home. ____________________________

Keneally's most famous book is about Nazi Germany during World War II. It tells the story of about 1,000 Jewish people and a man named Schindler. Schindler helped these people live through those terrible times. Keneally went to Germany and many other countries to talk to people about Schindler. This book, Schindler's List, was made into a movie.
3. Topic: ________________

Toni Morrison is an African-American writer. She often writes about African-American women. She tells about their lives and about the terrible things that happen to them. In Morrison's books we learn a lot about these women.

In 1993, Morrison won the Nobel Prize for Literature. Two of her most famous books are Beloved and Jazz.

- He writes books about different places, so he has to go to those places.
- We see through their eyes, and we learn what they are thinking and feeling.
- We can almost see the Irish countryside and hear the people speaking.
Exercise 7

A. Here are two topics. A sentence for each topic is already there. Find the other sentences for each topic in the box. Write them on the lines after the first sentence. (You can change the order later to make good paragraphs.)

Topic 1: Drinks that are good for your health
Some kinds of drinks are very good for your health.

- Milk is another healthy drink.
- Doctors say it is bad for your stomach and your head.
- Many people drink cola, but it is not good for you.
- It is very good for children and also for women.
- A little coffee is okay, but lots of coffee is bad.
- Orange juice is one of these healthy drinks.
- Some doctors think this is the way to a healthy life.
- It has lots of sugar, so it is bad for your teeth.
- So drink lots of orange juice and milk!
- Another drink that can be bad for you is coffee.
- It has lots of good things in it.
- It has other bad things in it, too.

Topic 2: Drinks that are not good for your health
Some popular drinks are not good for your health.

- Doctors say it is bad for your stomach and your head.
- Many people drink cola, but it is not good for you.
- It is very good for children and also for women.
- A little coffee is okay, but lots of coffee is bad.
- Orange juice is one of these healthy drinks.
- Some doctors think this is the way to a healthy life.
- It has lots of sugar, so it is bad for your teeth.
- So drink lots of orange juice and milk!
- Another drink that can be bad for you is coffee.
- It has lots of good things in it.
- It has other bad things in it, too.
B. Look at the sentences for each topic again. Rewrite the sentences in the right order. Make a good paragraph.

Paragraph 1

Paragraph 2
Comprehension Skills

Exercise 8

In each paragraph there is one extra sentence. It is not about the topic. Find the sentence and cross it out. Then write the topic.

Hobbies

1. Topic: Rollerblading

Rollerblading is a very popular new sport. People in many countries around the world go rollerblading. Rollerblades go on your feet like roller skates and ice skates. They have little wheels, like roller skates. When you go rollerblading, you go very fast. You must be careful! You must not go on streets with lots of traffic or people. It is also a good idea to ride your bicycle. At first, you must go slowly and you must have special clothes. After you learn, you can go fast and have fun!

The sentence: “It is also a good idea to ride your bicycle” is not about rollerblading. So it is crossed out.

2. Topic: Bicycling

In his free time, Jeff loves to go bicycling. After many hours in the office, he wants exercise. So on weekends he goes for long bicycle rides. He works just a few miles from home. Sometimes he rides for a few hours and sometimes he rides all day. Some of his friends also ride bicycles. They often ride their bicycles together. The doctor says Jeff is very healthy and has very strong legs!

3. Topic: Gardening

On summer days, Liz works in her garden. She has some flowers and lots of vegetables. She likes the flowers, but she doesn’t work with them a lot. She works most of the time with the vegetables. Liz’s husband likes going to the movies. She likes to grow vegetables, and she also likes to cook them. She does not eat meat, but she eats lots of her vegetables. Liz says they are much better than the vegetables from the store.

4. Topic: Cooking

Mike loves to cook. He cooks all kinds of dishes, but his favorite dishes are desserts. He says cooking is very relaxing. When he is working in the kitchen, he thinks only about cooking. He doesn’t think about work or bad things. He can bake big, beautiful cakes with fruit or with chocolate. Children must not eat a lot of chocolate every day. On Saturdays, Mike has lots of time for cooking. He makes a very good dinner and a special dessert. Then he and his family have a good meal.
Learn new words every week. It is important to write new words. You can remember them much better that way. Here is a good way to learn new words:

a. Write the new word. Be sure the spelling is correct.
b. Write the sentence (or sentences) around the word from your reading.
c. Write the meaning of the new word in English or in your own language.
d. Check the meaning with your teacher or in the dictionary.

Example:

a. New word: bride
b. Sentences: They come to a river with a bridge. Some people are on the bridge.
c. Meaning: something that goes across a river
d. Check the meaning with your teacher or in the dictionary.

Is it correct? yes

Are these meanings correct? Look back at your notebook and see. Look again at the words from last week. Look at the words from the weeks before. Do you know them now? Do a New Words Quiz every week.
Do you know about the “100 words”? You see these words very often when you read in English. You know many of them already. Good readers know them all very well. They read the words very quickly. They do not have to stop and think. This way, good readers can think more about the ideas. They understand better.

Now you can learn the 100 words. Here is the list of words:

What is context? It is the sentence or sentences around a word. The context can tell you a lot about a word.

These exercises can help you learn about context. Some words are missing in each story. You must use the context to find the right words.

First read the story. Think about the context for each missing word. Then look for the right words.

Example:

Mara Milvaney is 36 years old. Mara and her family live in a small _______ in Australia.

What is the missing word?

horse  meat  girl  town  yard

The missing word is town. It is the only word that is good for this context. A family does not live in a horse, a meat, a girl, or a yard.

Exercise 1

Read the story. Write the words in the right places.
Mara Milvaney is 36 years old. Mara and her family live in a small town in Australia. Mara and her husband, Dan, have three children, two boys and a girl. They live in a small house with a large yard. The children like animals very much. The family has three cats, two dogs, and a horse.

Mara and Dan also like animals. They have a sheep farm. They sell the young sheep for meat. People in Europe and the United States buy the meat. Mara also sells the sheep’s wool for clothes. Australian wool goes to many countries.

Exercise 2

Read the story. Write the words in the right places.

Malcolm Morris is 29 years old. He lives in Charlottesville, Tobago. Tobago is a small country in the Caribbean Sea. Malcolm’s town is near the sea. There are few cars in this town, but there are many boats.

Malcolm is a fisherman. Every morning he goes out early in his boat and gets some fish. In the afternoon he works in his vegetable garden. He eats lots of fish and vegetables. He also sells some fish in another town. In the evening he sometimes works with the other fishermen. They often work on their boats. Sometimes he sits in a cafe with his friends. They like to talk about fishing and life.

In Part Three, Unit 1, you learned new words from your pleasure reading. In this unit, you are going to learn new words in another way—in categories.

A category is like a topic. It tells about words that go together. It helps you remember the words.

Category: Favorite foods in the United States

steak                  fried chicken hamburgers            hot dogs spaghetti             pizza
tacos                 sandwiches muffins               pancakes apple pie             ice cream
brownies              chocolate chip cookies

Write the name of your country or home city in the blank. Then write some words for this category.

Category: Favorite foods in __________________

Talk to another student about his or her favorite foods.

Part Four

Thinking Skills

www.IELTS4U.blogfa.com
Do you think in English when you are reading? Or do you think in your language? You can understand better if you think in English. These exercises can help you learn to think in English.

Circle the best answer.

Edwin works in a restaurant. He is the only cook. He cooks lunch and dinner. He does not cook breakfast. The restaurant is closed

- a. in the evening.
- b. at lunch time.
- c. in the morning.
- d. on Tuesdays.

The right answer is c, “in the morning.” Morning is the time for breakfast. Edwin does not cook breakfast and Edwin is the only cook. That means the restaurant is not open for breakfast. So the restaurant is closed in the morning.

Answer a, “in the evening,” is not right. Breakfast is not an evening meal. Dinner is the evening meal, and Edwin cooks dinner. The restaurant is not closed in the evening.

Answer b, “at lunch time,” is not right. Edwin cooks lunch, so the restaurant is not closed at lunch time.

Answer d, “on Tuesdays,” is not right. The sentences do not tell about the days of the week.

Guidelines for Thinking Skills Exercises

- Do some thinking skills exercises every week.
- Work quickly and don’t use a dictionary.
- Try to guess the meaning of new words.
- Think in English to find the correct answer.

Introduction

Basic Reading Power is intended for students who are in a beginning-level English program in junior high school, high school, college, or adult education. We assume that the students who use this book will be literate in their own language. They should have an English vocabulary of about three hundred words, and they should be familiar with the simple present, present continuous, and simple past tenses.

The aim of this book is to teach strategies that will allow students to build on their already established cognitive abilities and background knowledge. A strategic approach will enable students to view reading in English as a problem-solving activity rather than a translation exercise. This way, students can learn good reading habits and skills, and they can avoid problems that commonly result from poor reading habits. Students will gain confidence at this early stage, which, in turn, helps them to gain access more quickly to English-language material for study, work, or pleasure.

In Basic Reading Power, students are expected to work on all four parts of the book concurrently as they develop multiple aspects of their reading ability. This approach is essential for the successful outcome of a reading program using this book. Basic Reading Power is intended to prepare students for work in Reading Power, which has a similar general approach and layout.

General Guidelines for Teaching Reading with Basic Reading Power

- Actively engage students in the reading lesson. It is important for them to enjoy their work and not see the reading lessons as "busywork."
- Have students work in pairs or groups whenever possible. This helps them to develop new thinking styles and increases language acquisition.
- Focus on the thinking processes that the students use to complete the exercises. The right answers are not as important as how the students got those answers.
- Be sure that students know why they are doing an exercise. Awareness of the purpose of their work helps the students become involved more actively and results in increased learning.

Part One: Pleasure Reading

The goal of this part of the book is to introduce students to the idea of extensive reading and to give them the opportunity to experience the rewards of such reading in terms of both improved reading ability and general language ability. To participate successfully in extensive reading, they will need to gain confidence in their abilities and to experience the satisfaction and enjoyment that such reading can bring. For these reasons, teachers should allow students maximum freedom in pacing their reading, choosing their books, and expressing their opinions. Two other factors are also essential for students to discover the pleasure in pleasure reading: a relaxed and trusting atmosphere in the classroom and a high level of enthusiasm and commitment on the part of the teacher.

The extent to which students benefit from their pleasure reading, however, depends on how they go about it. Thus, in this part of the book, students are introduced to some of the ways native speakers approach such reading.
These ways include the following:

- reading for the meaning of a story
- predicting what comes next in a story
- responding to the ideas in a story
- relating parts of a story to their own lives
- skipping over unknown words
- breaking a story into parts (analysis)
- talking about a story

The pleasure reading material in the book consists of an introduction, ten fables, ten short stories, and one long story. It is important that students read these fables and stories in the order presented because the vocabulary and grammatical structures in each story build upon those in previous stories. In the last section of Part One: Pleasure Reading, students are encouraged to read books for pleasure, and they are guided in the selection of appropriate books.

As mentioned above, the first ten readings are fables. Since fables are a part of every culture, students will find them easy to relate to. The next 11 stories are about people. They are not fables. You should point out to the students that many of the stories are true or could be true. These stories also provide material for discussion of cultural differences.

The main goal for the teacher throughout is to guide the students in learning how to respond to these fables and stories.

Guidelines for Reading the Fables and Stories

General approach

- Encourage students to talk about each story before, during, and after reading it. As they talk, the students make important connections: They connect what they already know and can express in their own language with what they read in the story.
- Lead the discussion at first, in order to model the process for the students. If necessary, provide and practice specific vocabulary for the students to use in such discussions. When the students have had sufficient practice, they should be allowed to lead the discussion themselves.
- Use the first fable (“The Big Family in the Little House”) as an example with the class. Go through all the reading steps together with them.

Before reading a story

- Encourage the students to preview the story. Tell them to look at the title and at any illustrations accompanying the story and to identify what they see.
- Lead the students to make predictions about the story by asking them the following questions. Be sure to have them explain their answers as well.

  What is the story about?
  Who are the people in the story?
  Where are they?
  Is this story about today or about the past?
  Do you think it is a sad story or a happy one?
  Do you think the story is true?
- Ask the students to read the first paragraph of the story. Then have them make more predictions about what comes next.

Reading the story

- Ask the students to read the story silently all the way through. Tell them not to stop for new words or to mark the text in any way while they are reading. This would distract their attention from the story itself.
- Do not let students use dictionaries while they are reading! Tell them they will have an opportunity to deal with the new words later on.
- Put the students in small groups and ask them to retell the story to each other. Then you can reconstruct the story together as a whole class.

After reading the story

- Discuss with the students their responses to the story by asking them the following questions:
  Did you like this story? Why?
  Who is in the story?
  Do you think it is a true story?
  How did the story make you feel?
  Is the ending a good one?
  How could we change the ending?
- Ask students to read the story again. If an illustration accompanies the story, tell them to label parts of it with names and words from the story.
• Ask students to look back at the story and underline any new vocabulary. They should write those words on the lines below the story or in a notebook and look up the meaning in their dictionaries. They may need help in finding the correct meaning and in wording a satisfactory definition. Model the process and assist students in acquiring independence in the use of dictionaries.

Additional activity
As a whole-class activity after reading the story, ask students to brainstorm about other possible endings. Working with the whole class, ask the students to dictate the best ending they have come up with. Write that ending on the board and then ask students to copy it into their notebooks. More confident students can be asked to do this activity in small groups. After some practice, individual students can try to write their own endings and then compare their endings with those of other students. Have students write another ending as a homework assignment.

Pleasure Reading Books
Evaluating students' progress.
There are a number of ways you can evaluate students' progress and comprehension in their pleasure reading books. Whatever method you choose, however, you must keep the “pleasure” in mind. Therefore, feedback to students should be positive and should focus on their personal reactions to their reading. In addition, students' output, whether oral or written, should not be judged on pronunciation or grammar.

Here are some ways to evaluate pleasure reading:
• Individual teacher/student conferences. This is the best way for you to come to a quick assessment of each student's understanding of what he or she is reading. These conferences can give the student an opportunity for a one-to-one discussion with you in which you can model ways that native speakers talk about literature. The focus of these talks should be the student's response to the book, rather than a retelling of the story. By giving individual attention to students, these conferences can also help students build confidence in their abilities.

Avoid asking individual students to stand up and report on their reading orally in front of the whole class, which could be damaging to the students' self-confidence.

• Pleasure Reading Book List. (See text, page 38.) Keep track of the number of books read by referring to this list. As a variation, keep book lists for each student posted in the classroom. With younger or competitive students, this tactic can act as a spur to motivation, though care must be taken to keep the competitive aspect from becoming too serious.

• Writing about pleasure reading books. (See text, pages 38–39) This letter-writing activity encourages students to put down on paper their thoughts about a book in an informal context. The letters can be written in class or assigned as homework. Then students can exchange letters, or you can select some letters to read aloud or write on the board. Other students who have read the same book can be asked their opinions. The emphasis of any discussion should, as always, be on the students' reactions, not on details of the story.

• Pleasure Reading Report. (See text, page 40.) Though long, formal book reports are not recommended, a short report following this format could be filled in by the student on completion of each book and kept on file in the class or in the student's notebook. They can then be read aloud and compared if more than one student has read a particular book. In addition, if they are kept on file in the classroom, students can refer to them in choosing books.

Choosing books for pleasure reading
The limited vocabulary of the students does not necessarily mean a limited choice of reading material for them. Many publishing companies produce books for the beginning, or "starter," ESL/EFL level, with a wide range of subject matter to interest both younger and more mature students.

Many teachers have found that the question of how to provide pleasure reading for all their students can best be resolved by the institution of a class lending library with a few more titles than there are students so that each student will be able to choose a book. It may also be possible to combine libraries with another teacher or teachers or to set up the pleasure reading collection in the school library. In this case, however, students need to have free and frequent access to the library.

Aside from being able to choose subject matter that is interesting to them, students also need to be free to choose books at an appropriate level. Be sure to include books at a somewhat higher level for those students who quickly gain confidence and want more challenging reading as well as very easy books for those students who progress more slowly.

Listed here are a few of the many available titles from the most widely distributed publishers.

Very Low Level

Addison Wesley Longman

Longman Easystarts—200-word vocabulary. These books are all 16 pages long and come with a cassette recording of the text. Examples:

- April in Moscow by Stephen Rabley
- Between Two Worlds by Stephen Rabley
- Dead Man's River by Elizabeth Laird
- Dino's Day in London by Stephen Rabley
- Who Wants to Be a Star? by Margaret Iggulden

Longman Originals—Stage 1: 300-word vocabulary. Cassettes available. Examples:

- Ali and His Camera by Raymond Pizante
- Marcel and the Shakespeare Letters by Stephen Rabley
- Mike's Lucky Day by Leslie Dunkling
- The Missing Coins by John Escott
- The Wrong Man by Kris Anderson

Longman Structural Readers—Stage 1: 300-word vocabulary. Examples:

- Aladdin and His Magic Lamp by A. Stempleski
- Car Thieves by L. G. Alexander
- The Flying Spy by Alwyn Cox
- Green Island by A. G. Eyre
- Kate and the Clock by Leslie Dunkling
- The Mystery of the Loch Ness Monster by Leslie Dunkling

Heinemann Educational Books, Inc.

Heinemann ESL Guided Readers—Starter Level: 300-word vocabulary. Examples:

- Alissa
- Blue Fins
- The Briefcase
- L. A. Detective
- April in Moscow by Stephen Rabley
- Between Two Worlds by Stephen Rabley
- Dead Man's River by Elizabeth Laird
- Dino's Day in London by Stephen Rabley
- Who Wants to Be a Star? by Margaret Iggulden

More Advanced Level

Oxford University Press

Oxford Bookworms—Level 1: 400-word vocabulary.

Examples:

- The Coldest Place on Earth by Lewis Carroll
- The President's Murderer by Anna Sewell
- The Elephant Man Under the Moon by Johanna Spyri
- Love or Money White Death by Alexandre Dumas

Heinemann Educational Books, Inc.

Heinemann ESL Guided Readers—Beginner Level: 600-word vocabulary. Examples:

- Another World by Elaine O'Reilly
- Fire in the Forest by Ian Swindale
- Wanted: Anna Marker by Kris Anderson

Heinemann Educational Books, Inc.

Heinemann ESL Guided Readers—Beginner Level: 600-word vocabulary. Examples:

- Dangerous Journey by This Is San Francisco
- Death of a Soldier by This Is New York
- The Long Tunnel by The Truth Machine
- Rich Man, Poor Man by The Wall
Part Two: Comprehension Skills

General Guidelines

- You should always make sure that the students understand the purpose of the exercises they are doing and how the particular skill relates to general reading ability. Otherwise, the exercises become busywork and the students lose interest.
- The whole class should work together when the teacher introduces and works on the first exercise in a unit.
- Model the thinking processes that students need to use to carry out the exercise. That is, you should “think out loud” in front of the class so that students can learn about those processes and the language used to talk about them.
- Have the students work in pairs or small groups whenever possible.
- Since the exercises in each unit become gradually more difficult, students should always work on them in the order in which they are presented.
- The exercises in this part of the text should be approached as much as possible in a spirit of playful competition. When the exercises are treated like games and the atmosphere of the class is relaxed, students become more involved and feel freer to take risks.
- For some of the exercises, students may give answers that are different from those in the Answer Key, and any reasonable answers should be accepted as long as the student can justify them.

Unit 1: Scanning for Key Words
The scanning exercises in units 1 and 2 are designed to help students get over the habit of reading every word on a page. In scanning, students must quickly look for specific information, skipping over unneeded words. In this unit, students scan across a line for a key word. Note that the words used in the exercises are from the list of the “100 Words” in Part Three, Unit 2. In doing these exercises, students will also be working to improve their sight recognition of these important words—the 100 most common words in English. (You can refer to page 163 in this Teacher’s Guide for more information about the 100 words.)

Since speed is essential to the aim of scanning, encourage students to work quickly, either by timing them or by conducting the exercises as a kind of race among pairs of students.

Unit 2: Scanning for Information
In these exercises, students scan a variety of real-life materials for the answers to some specific questions. In doing this, they will learn to move their eyes quickly across a page and not be distracted from their search for information. Again, speed is important. The material in this unit can also serve as a source for discussion of certain aspects of U.S. culture and how they compare with other cultures.

Note that students should not use a dictionary while working on the scanning exercises, but should skip any words they do not know. Discuss some of the vocabulary afterwards in a general discussion about the material.

Unit 3: Making Inferences
In English, students will often have to “read between the lines” in order to get the meaning of a passage. To do this, students must be willing to make guesses—which means taking risks. These exercises will help them gain confidence in their ability to infer meaning in a reading text.

In this unit, getting the “right answer” is less important than the thinking process that students go through to get their answers. Allow students the opportunity to come up with different answers if they can justify their ideas based on information in the passage.

Unit 4: Looking for Topics
In English text, ideas are generally expressed and developed in a “topic-centered” way; that is, writers first give the topic and then they comment on it. In learning to read in English, it is essential that students begin early on to think in terms of the topic.

These exercises work best if the students work in pairs. That way, the two students can help each other when one or the other does not understand. Furthermore, in talking to each other about the topic, the students will develop their metacognitive ability to think and speak about text in terms that will help them to comprehend what they read.
Unit 5: Understanding and Building Sentences

Students at this low level need practice forming good sentences and identifying the parts of the sentences most important to the meaning. Though this is not always thought of as a reading skill, it is important to remember that the thinking processes involved in reading and writing are often inseparable. The ability to find meaning in a sentence is a skill that good readers in English frequently take for granted.

In these exercises, students will have the opportunity to be creative in forming sentences. However, the sentences must always be grammatically correct and reflect correct usage. Note that in exercises 1, 2, 4, 6, and 7, there are several possible ways to connect the parts of the sentences but only a few ways that they can be connected into correct sentences using each part only once.

Unit 6: Understanding Paragraphs

This unit aims to provide the students with practice in recognizing the topic-centered nature of English texts. Students must first understand that good comprehension depends on the reader's ability to identify the topic. Good readers, in fact, are always unconsciously or consciously looking for the topic as they read.

Students then need to understand how a paragraph in a text focuses on a topic. For that reason, the purpose of the first three exercises is to familiarize students with the difference between a paragraph and a random group of sentences. Students who need more practice in recognizing the form of a paragraph can be given this further assignment: Tell students to choose one of the groups of sentences about the Beatles that makes a good paragraph (1, 3, or 4) and write the sentences in the form of a paragraph. Point out that they should begin the paragraph by indenting the first sentence.

As they write out the sentences in paragraph form, the students will have an opportunity to notice again that every sentence in the paragraph refers to the same topic. Often beginning-level students need this kind of reinforcement in order to internalize both the form and the topic-centered nature of a paragraph in English.

Exercises 4 through 8 give the students practice first in recognizing the topic and then in thinking of the topic and stating it in comprehensible form. Where students are asked to think of the topic, various answers are of course acceptable, as long as they express the topic correctly (neither too specific nor too general).

In this unit, as in all the other skills units, allow time for discussion about how the students came up with their answers. Encourage students to talk explicitly about the thinking processes involved.

Teachers who are looking for further work on topics of paragraphs will find a more extensive treatment (at a high-beginner level) in Reading Power.

Part Three: Vocabulary Building

Research in second-language reading confirms what many teachers know by instinct and experience: Building vocabulary is an essential factor in reading improvement, especially at the lower levels.

In this part of the book, students are encouraged to build vocabulary in various ways. All the exercises, however, present unfamiliar words in meaningful contexts so that students can learn to use such contexts to figure out meaning through the application of cognitive skills. In fact, the more cognitive capacity required in the process of figuring out meaning, the more likely students are to fix the word and the meaning in their long-term memory.

For this reason, students should be discouraged from using their dictionaries or asking friends or teachers for the meanings. Instead, encourage them to try to establish meaning first by thinking about the context and making guesses. Only then should the dictionary come into play, as a means to check the guesses. This approach is established from the very beginning, in Part One of the book, where students are asked not to use dictionaries while reading for pleasure.

Unit 1: New Words from Your Reading

This unit should be introduced after students have read several of the fables in Part One: Pleasure Reading. Below each fable, students... will have written some new words. They should then choose ten of these words to transcribe onto the pages of this unit.

These words may, of course, be different for different students, thus allowing them to develop their own personal vocabulary learning project. Having learned the procedure for writing the new word, the sentence or sentences, and the meaning, students should then continue this practice in their own notebooks. Ideally, these should be small notebooks that they can easily carry around and that are used exclusively for this purpose.

At the end of a week or other given period of time, have students test their knowledge of the new words of that week by giving themselves a New Words Quiz (see page 103). Verify that students quiz themselves in this way at regular intervals throughout the course.

Unit 2: The 100 Words

In this unit, students are asked to focus their attention on the 100 most common words in English. Although these words are often taken for granted by teachers, they are not always easily learned through context, and they often constitute a serious stumbling block for the beginning reader. Be aware, in fact, that these 100 most common words make up 50 percent of the words in an English text of average difficulty! If students have to stop and think about these words, their reading speed and comprehension will obviously suffer.

Therefore, it is essential that students learn to recognize these common words on sight. That is the aim of this unit and the reason students are asked to concentrate on the spelling and form of each word, rather than the grammar or meaning.

Unit 3: Learning about Context

In this unit, the students are introduced to the concept of context in vocabulary learning. Emphasize the relationship of the word to the general context of the story or the more specific context of the sentence, and ask students to be explicit about the reasons for their choice of words. In exercises 1 through 4, the missing words are given to the students, but in the later exercises, students are to think of the missing words. They may come up with some different answers from those suggested in the Answer Key; these should be accepted as long as they make sense.

Unit 4: Guessing Word Meanings

In this unit, students are now faced with words that are probably unfamiliar to them. In order to arrive at some kind of meaning for the words, they must tap their own experience and knowledge of the world. Note that students should ideally try to write definitions in English, however vague or circuitous they may be, as this is excellent practice. However, if that is not possible due to the level of proficiency or maturity of the class, they may write equivalent words in their own language.

You should go through the first exercise with the whole class as a group, and model the thought processes that help the reader use the contextual clues to arrive at a hypothetical meaning. Afterwards, have students try to do several items on their own and then work in pairs to compare their answers or figure out together meanings they haven’t deciphered individually. If you are working with students whose language is unfamiliar to you, students should do this pair work with another student who speaks the same language, especially if students cannot think of the word in English but can think of an equivalent word in their own language.

Unit 5: Learning New Words in Categories

This unit builds on the use of students’ own life experiences to help them learn new words in categories. Grouping the words in categories puts them into context for the students and so increases the probability of retention. Furthermore, the personal involvement required in the exercises is a further positive influence on the acquisition and retention of the vocabulary. Therefore, these exercises require a large degree of individual input on the part of the students and allow them to choose the vocabulary to be learned to a large extent.

For the first exercise, after making sure that the students understand the example in the text, do another example as a group. For this second example, focus on your favorite place, providing some vocabulary and soliciting other words from the class. The other exercises can be approached in a similar manner, with less guidance as students become more confident.

In exercises 4, 6, 7, and 8, encourage students to create categories that reflect their own life experience, and after each exercise ask them to explain their categories to the class. For example, in exercise 4, one student might put “mountains” in “Village Life” (e.g., a Swiss village) and another student might put “mountains” under “City Life” (e.g., Mexico City).

Part Four: Thinking Skills

These exercises provide practice in some of the basic thought patterns of English. Students can solve the problems presented in the exercises by applying such patterns as synonymy, opposites, analogies, negation, part-whole relationships, and drawing conclusions based on evidence.

The exercises gradually become more difficult, so it is important that they be assigned in the order they are presented in the book. Once again, the use of dictionaries should be discouraged while students work on the thinking skills exercises.

In this part of the book, students should work alone. Once all the students have completed a set of problems, either in class time or as a homework assignment, check them together in a group session in which students volunteer to read the items aloud. Encourage students to express their disagreement if they have different answers and ask them to explain how they arrived at those answers. This kind of discussion can help them externalize their thinking processes and lead them to greater metacognitive awareness.
BASIC READING POWER

Beatrice S. Mikulecky/Linda Jeffries

BASIC READING POWER is a student-centered reading skills textbook with a process approach to reading improvement. Its innovative design allows beginning-level students (with a vocabulary below 300 words) to use four key sections concurrently to become better readers in school, college, or business.

Pleasure Reading encourages students to master new reading strategies and broaden their vocabularies by helping them select books appropriate to their level and enjoy them on their own.

Comprehension Skills emphasizes strategic reading skills, such as scanning, making inferences, recognizing topics, and understanding sentences.

Vocabulary Building offers strategies for learning new words, including personalized vocabulary lists, visual recognition of key words, using context cues, and expanding categories of words.

Thinking Skills provides targeted practice in inference and analytical skills.

BASIC READING POWER also includes a practical Teacher’s Guide section and an Answer Key.
